New BRC

Just curious, Have any of you made plans to roll out the updated BRC? If you're going to do it, what's your timeframe?

VIRGINIA

Peter, no plans to switch.

~Bruce Biondo

UTAH

Utah is waiting to see what happens. Too many questions.

~ Kurt Stromberg

MASSACHUSETTS

Same for Massachusetts.

~Eugene Carabine

MARYLAND

Somebody has to step through the door or be first in the water. We plan to begin pilot testing the BRC in August. If anyone wants to come down and watch I'll setup grandstands.

~ Philip Sause

MARYLAND

Peter, It looks like Maryland will. We will be evaluating the BRC - the MSF is now calling the current BRC the BRC 2013 and the 'new' BRC, formally known as Update 2014, the BRC - as to how to implement for the next couple of months. We have already made arrangements with the MSF to conduct a Transitional RiderCoach Trainer Prep (T-RCTP) in July. This would include a Transitional-RiderCoach Prep (T-RCP). After that we would begin conducting T-RCP's across the State up to Thanksgiving if necessary to update all of our Instructors/RiderCoaches. We are favoring the e3x5x10 option as it would have the least impact on our current process. We need to work out a deal on the cost of the MSF's eCourse. If you need more details let me know.

~Philip Sause

NEW JERSEY

NJ does not intend to switch (yet).

~Lori Sannella

CALIFORNIA

California has no plans to roll out any changes in the foreseeable future.

~Bruce Biondo

NORTH CAROLINA

I am intrigued by the new curriculum and want to move North Carolina in that direction as soon as it is feasible. Will be watching Phil in Maryland with great interest!

~Robert Wagner

MARYLAND

Bob, I'll save you a seat in "the front row".

~Philip Sause

MICHIGAN

Michigan was seriously looking at trying to roll it out for the beginning of 2015 season. The challenge seems to be getting ALL the coaches and training site providers ready to roll all at once. We will still be doing coach updates and coach trainer updates, to prepare. But right now no definite date has been set to make the official change.

~Chad Teachout

CONNECTICUT

CT is sending a few RiderCoach Trainers to be certified, but won't roll it out until 2015 at the earliest.
